HIGH SCHOOL CAMPAIGN

Warm response noted to fund drive appeal

A renewed interest in the Catholic High School Fund Campaign has been noted as a result of the appeal launched one month ago to spur lagging payments and to obtain pledges from new Marion County residents.

When the appeal was announced, campaign officials noted that more than 20% of the total pledges still remained to be paid within the 26-month payment period due to expire late this year.

In the four weeks that have elapsed since, the campaign office reports, a large number of families who were behind in their payments have now become current and many new residents of the city have made their pledges to the fund campaign.

Parents throughout the city expressed gratification at the cordial reception reported by the men who are making the campaign calls. Many families who had discontinued payments because of illness or financial reverses stated that they intended to pay out their pledges as soon as they were able to do so.

AN EXAMPLE of the spirit in which the faith have received the new campaign appeal is contained in the following letter received by Archbishop Schuler:

65 YEARS A PRIEST — Father John H. Scheefers, pastor-emeritus of St. Mary's Church, Indianapolis, will mark the 65th anniversary of his ordination today, June 8. Father Scheefers, who is 89, has been living in retirement at 4317 N. Park Ave. for many years. His sister, Miss Anna Scheefers, has been serving as his housekeeper during his entire priestly life.

"I am inclosing a Cashier's Check in the amount of $250.00 for the Catholic High School Fund."

"Indianapolis and Marion County has been very fortunate in providing Catholic Education for the Catholic children of this community. I myself, as well as the other members of my immediate family have been privileged to attend Catholic schools, elementary through college."

"We do not realize how fortunate we are in having the number of Catholic schools, especially high schools. I know of other communities where there are only one or two Catholic High Schools and therefore a large number of Catholic children of high school age, are attending the Public Schools. One does not really begin to appreciate the value of a Catholic education till years later."

ONE NORTHEAST pastor reports that "everybody is responding." He stated that the vast majority of those who had stopped pledge payments have promised to start paying again, and that all new members of the parish have been contacted and have turned in pledges.

A southside pastor reports an equally warm response. Some of his parishioners requested that the payment period be extended another 12 months to give them more time to fulfill pledges in full.

A pastor of a parish on the northeast side included the following written comment with a check covering pledge payments: "I was surprised when the mon experienced such friendly receptions and how the little visits awakened others to their sense of responsibility."

"COOPERATION has been wonderful," a pastor of a parish on the northwest side reports. "Many of the new people in the parish have made pledges for the remainder of the campaign."

Adult Confirmation

Archbishop Schuler will officiate at an Adult Confirmation ceremony Sunday, June 10, in St. Peter and Paul Cathedral at 2:30 p.m. All unconfirmed adult Catholics in the Marion County area may receive the sacrament at this time. Candidates and their sponsors are asked to be present in the Cathedral at 2:30 p.m. for a brief instruction on the procedure.

MADISON, Wis.—The Wisconsin Supreme Court has struck down an unconstitutional law providing for limited transportation for private school pupils on taxpayer school buses.

The court's 4-2 decision against the law, which was to go into effect July 1, affects some 52,000 private school pupils who would have been eligible for such transportation.

The law had aroused widespread controversy in the state. Catholics in general had favored it, but the Wisconsin Council of Churches and most other Protestant organizations in the state had opposed it. There was no immediate Catholic comment on the State Supreme Court's ruling.

THE LAW stipulated that bus routes be provided along regular routes for all children to the public school "which they are entitled to attend." It said that non-public school pupils would have to make their own arrangements for getting from the public school to their own schools.

The heart of the controversy surrounding the measure centered on whether it benefited the children or private schools.

In its majority decision, the State Supreme Court ruled in favor of a section of the Wisconsin constitution that it did on the First Amendment provision of the U.S. Constitution in regard to establishment of religion.

The majority decision stated: "The First Amendment provision which prohibits laws respecting an establishment of religion lends itself to more flexibility of interpretation than the provision contained in the last clause of section 19, Article VII of the Wisconsin constitution (which prohibits the expenditure of any public funds for the benefit of religious societies or religious or theological seminaries)."

Justice George Currie, who wrote the dissenting opinion, said the law would have benefited school children primarily, and not religious organizations.

Justice Currie stated that there are only 10 private schools in Wisconsin which are not operated by religious organizations and that none of these would be helped by the law, but the majority stated that 500 church-related schools would benefit.

He referred to other court decisions in regard to transportation for private schools and then added: "The weight of authority since the Everson case is clearly against the constitutionality of providing publicly financed transportation and related aids to non-public school children."

Justice Fairchild said that there are 700,000 students attending public schools in Wisconsin and 240,000 attending parochial schools, and that the parents' right to send children to parochial schools is protected by the U.S. Constitution.

The Church-State provisions of the Wisconsin constitution, he stated, "have not meant that the laws must be completely devoid of benefit to religious societies or parochial schools."

He cited as one of the benefits the tax exemptions, provided under Wisconsin law, for religious institutions. He also said that bus transportation was unknown in 1848 when the present Wisconsin constitution was drawn up, and therefore it is not known how the drafters of the constitution would have felt on the current issue.

DISAGREEING with the opinion holding that the transportation law would create a special class of benefits for parochial schools, Justice Fairchild said that in passing the law the legislature told parents the following: "If you choose to [have your children attend] a parochial school, we will furnish you [transportation]." COMMUNITIES PROFIT

'Shared-time' working in Minnesota schools

ST. PAUL, Minn.—Catholic and public high schools of several Minnesota communities are cooperating in shared-time programs, the Catholic Bulletin, official weekly of the St. Paul archdiocese, found in a survey.

In Rochester, Wabasha, Austin and St. Paul, some Catholic high school students attend certain classes in public schools.

In Caledonia and Bird Island, shared time is reciprocal. Public school students take some of their academic courses in the Catholic school; Catholic school students study home economics, shop and agriculture at the public school.

"There have been so few students in the public school desiring language and higher math that it did not pay them to hire a teacher for these courses," Sister Sarto said. "Likewise, we could not afford shop facilities and a home economics department, and so an exchange was simply worked out."

"The number of students who have taken advantage of this program has varied, but at present about 33 per cent of our students take some work at the public school, and about 17 per cent of the public school students take some work at Loretto."

"We would be hard pressed to provide for our lower ability students if we did not have the use of public school facilities. Likewise, their college-bound students have always depended upon Loretto to provide a language course for them, and in many years the higher math course."

"The community has benefited from this program by having better trained and better satisfied students of all ability levels, and thus having more students remain in school."

In Wabasha, Minn., St. Felix high school students attend agriculture and industrial arts courses at Wabasha high school, but the public school students do not take courses at the Catholic school.

The program in Wabasha was inaugurated in 1948, according to Sister M. Leona, St. Felix principal, to serve "the few students interested in vocational courses. The expense of installation of these courses is beyond St. Felix's budget."

Each year 15 to 20 St. Felix students—about 10 per cent of the school's enrollment—participate in the program. "It is especially helpful to the terminal students," Sister Leona said. "It enables students to get courses which will be helpful to them and which we do not have the facilities to offer."

In addition to the agriculture and shop courses, some St. Felix students take trigonometry at Wabasha high school when it is not offered at their school. Four students did so last year.

In both Caledonia and Wabasha, the shared time also includes music.

The Caledonia band includes students from both the public and Catholic high schools. The Wabasha school band draws its members not only from the two high schools, but from a public and a Catholic grade school as well.

IN STILLWATER, Minn., eighth grade students from St. Michael's school have participated for some years in shops and home economics classes at Stillwater public high school, according to Rev. Francis J. Miller, pastor of St. Michael's church.

During the past six years, one or two St. Michael's students have been enrolled for remedial reading classes in the junior high school each year. And a year ago the junior high school "offered to take students especially gifted in math, as they were setting up classes for accelerated pupils," Father Miller said.

"So far we haven't taken advantage of the offer," he said, noting that "the relationship between our school and the public school is very good."

Msgr. Fussenegger dies at the age of 71

By FRED W. FRIES

Missiонер August R. Fussenegger, Archbishop's Director of Catholic Charities since 1929, died Thursday morning, June 7, in St. Theresia's Hospital, Indianapolis, after a long-standing heart ailment. He was 71.

The Chancery office stated at press time that Archbishop Schulte will offer a Pontifical Funeral Mass Monday morning, but that the date and time had not yet been determined.

Msgr. Fussenegger had spent many weeks in the hospital, but was released about two weeks ago to recuperate at home. He was readmitted two days ago when his condition took a turn for the worse.

Msgr. Fussenegger studied for the priesthood at St. Meinrad, and was ordained on November 12, 1918. His first assignment was as assistant pastor of Holy Cross Church, Indianapolis, where he served until 1923, when he was named assistant at Holy Angels, Indianapolis. In 1927 he was appointed assistant pastor of St. Francis de Sales Church, Indianapolis. From 1926 to 1938, he also served as Catholic chaplain of the Indiana Boys' School and the Indiana Girls' School.

In 1929, with his appointment as Diocesan Director of Catholic Charities, he began a long and distinguished career in the Catholic Charities field.

HIS FIRST efforts in his new post were directed to the coordination of the charitable organizations in the diocese and the establishment of new agencies that were needed.

In 1934 he attended the newly-founded School of Social Service at St. Louis University, where he received his Bachelor's degree in Social Work. Upon his return to Indianapolis, he was made General Director of all charities in the diocese and launched a re-organization of the Catholic Charities Bureau. It was at this time that he reorganized the St. Vincent's School for dependent children.

Msgr. Vincent J. Baldwin, 55, Vicar General of the Diocese of Rockville Centre, New York, as Titular Bishop of Bencenna and Auxiliary to Bishop Walter Keelers of Rockville Centre, as members of the Diocese of Rockville Centre.

The appointments were announced here by Archbishop Egidio Vagnozzi, Apostolic Delegate in the United States.

Bishop-elect Reh succeeds to a See left vacant by the elevation of the Rev. Paul C. Hallinan to the office of Archbishop of Atlanta last February.

Peace Corps head lashes at colleges

ST. LOUIS—Catholic universities and colleges in this country are falling down in their obligations to Latin America, U.S. Peace Corps Director R. Sargent Shriver, Jr., charged here.

He charged that Catholic institutions have failed to provide training of "poor" Latin American students and have produced only a small number of volunteers for the Peace Corps. The corps head, who is President Kennedy's brother-in-law, gave the commencement address at St. Louis University and was awarded an honorary doctorate of laws.

The corps head, who is President Kennedy's brother-in-law, gave the commencement address at St. Louis University and was awarded an honorary doctorate of laws.

SHRIVER said the Peace Corps is banking on U.S. universities and colleges to play an important part in the corps' operations. He lauded the St. Louis University's Peace Corps project in Honduras, but said many more volunteers from Catholic universities and colleges are needed.

He said the Jesuit schools of higher education, which include the universities here, have furnished only 48 of the 1,530 Peace Corps volunteers. The Jesuits conduct 27 universities and colleges in this country.

"While the governments of North and South America talk to one another, the communists talk to the people," Shriver asserted. "And what are the universities doing about it? Not as much as they should. Jesuit colleges and universities and many others admit Latin American students. But how many of them are from aristocratic and upper class families? And what do these young men study? The liberal arts, science, or perhaps one of the professions, law, engineering or medicine."

"What kind of Latin American students are studying in Russian universities, and in the universities of Latin America?" he continued.

"Not the rich students, but the poor ones, and the communists carefully select the brightest and most disaffected."

"What do they study? Not the learned professions, the studies that tend toward leadership to

No Russ to attend Council

GRAZ, Austria—The Patriarch of Moscow declared in Belgrade that the Russian Orthodox Church will reject any invitation to attend the forthcoming Second Vatican Council. It is reported here, Patriarch Alexei of Moscow was accompanied on his visit to the Yugoslav capital by the foreign affairs secretary of the Moscow patriarchate, Archbishop Nikodim.

The Patriarch's statement appeared to mark a return to the Russian Church's original stand against sending envoys to attend the Second Vatican Council. It is reported here, however, that his Yugoslav capital by the foreign affairs secretary of the Moscow patriarchate, Archbishop Nikodim.

But in March he told the German Catholic news agency KNA that if the Roman Catholic Church sends an invitation to the council, Russian Orthodox observers could attend providing nothing at the council is directed against the Orthodox churches or against Russia.

Evansville bishop hits grade dropping

FERDINAND, Ind. — Bishop Henry J. Grimmelmann of Evansville, Ind., spoke out here against the dropping of any grades in Catholic schools.

The prelate, speaking at St. Benedict College, said that "and to say, there have been voices—urging the surrender of some of our children and youth to secular institutions of learning."

But he said that what Catholics have accomplished in the past ought to reassure them in their plans for the future. "The whole task of educating Catholic children can be done without discarding any years of it," he said.

BENEDICTINE INVESTITURE

Clothing a Bride of Christ

AWAITING INVESTITURE—Miss Lavonna Bierman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marcellus Bierman of St. John's parish, Starlight, Ind., awaits the beginning of Mass on the day of investiture. She and the other three postulants have just completed an eight-day retreat prior to the ceremonies. Wearing her mother's wedding dress, she sits quietly in the convent library.

TONSURE—Seated in the middle of the altar with a white cloth on his knees, Archbishop Schulte cuts the hair ("May God divest thee of the old man with all its acts.") of each postulant as she kneels before him. Reverend Mother Marie Robert, at right, lifts the bridal veil for the tonsure. The master of ceremonies, right, holds the blessed habit which the Archbishop presents to each postulant. Upon conferring the garb, the Archbishop intones: "May God send thee with the new man, who is created according to God, in justice and holiness of Truth." She then leaves the chapel and returns in her new religious garb.

FINAL BLESSING—At the conclusion of the investiture ceremonies, the novices kneel on the top step of the altar to receive the blessing of the Archbishop. He sprinkles them with holy water and says: "May God conform your resolution, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen." The novices then kiss his ring and return to their places for the continuation of the Mass.

CEREMONY FINISHED—Sister Veronica and Sister Mary John leave the chapel at the conclusion of Mass and the investiture ceremonies. On their heads are wreaths of roses. They will now begin one year in the Novitiate at Our Lady of Grace, during which time they have limited contact with their families or friends on the outside. It is a period of personal enrichment and formation.

APPROACHES ALTAR—Carrying a lighted candle ("Ye prudent virgins, prepare your lamps, behold the Bridegroom approaches, go to meet Him."), the postulant approaches the altar before Mass. She remains in the front pew until the Offertory of the Mass when the actual religious investiture ceremony begins.

NEW APPEARANCE—Sister Veronica makes her appearance back in the chapel after changing her wedding gown for the Benedictine habit. She then kneels once again before the Archbishop for his blessing and her new name in religion. The white unbleached veil she is wearing above is exchanged at the altar for a blessed one.

WEIGH 1,100 POUNDS

New doors being made for St. Peter's Basilica

By MSGR. JAMES I. TUCEK

VATICAN CITY—Three massive bronze doors are being made for the front entrances to St. Peter's basilica.

If the artists working on them finish them in time they may be dedicated to commemorate the coming eucemical council.

Whether there are five doors in the front of the basilica. The central door of bronze is opened only rarely for solemn occasions. The door to the extreme right on entering is the "Judy Door," opened only by a pope in a jubilee year. The other three are of wood.

The wooden doors on either side of the central door are for everyday use—one for entering, the other for leaving the basilica. The wooden door at the extreme left on entering is called "The Door of Death" and today is never opened.

HISTORICALLY these five doors—which were also a feature of the preceding basilica—had other names and other functions. The extreme left was called "porta inferna" (the door of the inferno) because it was reserved for funeral processions. The next door was called "ravenniana," probably because it was used by soft Roman Italian, to avoid quarrels arising from their use of the door the Romans reserved for themselves. The word "ravenniana" referred to the Italians from the city of Ravenna and elsewhere in northern Italy.

The central door was called the "royal door" or the "silver door," because of the silver plating put there by Popes Gregory I (590), Honorius I (628) and Leo III (803). But the plating was always stolen and after Leo III it was never replaced.

The door to the right of the center was the "door of the Romans" and was jealously kept by them for their exclusive use. The last door to the extreme right was called the "guidonea" because it was through this door that guides took Bishops making their official visits to the Holy See and the pilgrims who often accompanied them.

THE PRESENT central door of bronze is the work of Antonio Averulino and was commissioned by Pope Eugene IV in 1455. The only other bronze door, the Holy Door, is visible only from the interior of the basilica. The outside of the door is bricked up and is opened only during a Holy Year of jubilee, normally every 25th year. The bronze door was commissioned by Pope Pius XII and was erected in 1958.

The replacement of the final three wooden doors with bronze ones has long been a wish of Vatican authorities. The wish became a reality when Prince George of Bavaria, who died 20 years ago as a crown of St. Peter's basilica, willed part of his fortune to the Vatican for this purpose.

An international competition was opened in 1947 for the selection of designs for the three doors. About 140 artists submitted designs, which were placed on public exhibition in the portico of St. Peter's. The 12 best designs were chosen and the competition was repeated for a choice of the final three.

THE THREE artists chosen were Alfredo Bionini, Venanzio Crocetti and Giacomo Manzù. Bionini died shortly afterward, and was replaced by a two-man team, Francesco Nagni and Alessandro Monteleone, who had been runners up in the competition.

The door on the far left has been assigned to Manzù. Its main themes will be the Ascension of Christ and the Assumption of Mary. The door to the left of the center, assigned to Crocetti, will synthesize the ancient history of the Church, from the Apostle Peter to the Council of Trent. Nagni and Monteleone will execute the doors to the right of the center. The modern history of the Church, from the Council of Trent to the present, will be their theme.

Each of the sets of doors will stand 25 feet high and 12 feet wide. Each door will weigh 1,100 pounds, including the bronze and inner frame.

Appeals for Latin America volunteers

PATERSON, N.J.—Latin America will fall to the communists unless an army of volunteers moves in to teach its people how to solve their social and economic problems, a Bolivian prelate warned here.

Speaking at a $20-a-plate dinner to celebrate the fifth anniversary of the founding of the Association for International Development (AID), Auxiliary Bishop Genaro M. Prata of La Paz also said the U.S. government's Alliance for Progress could be "a wonderful thing if it were laid on the right base."

Tax savings

DETROIT—Catholic schools in Michigan enroll 292,254 elementary and high school students and 17,885 college and university students.

Children in Catholic schools made up more than 15 per cent of the state's school enrollment in 1961. In the five Michigan dioceses, this represented a total savings to Michigan taxpayers of more than $150 million.

"What is wrong with this program," he said, "is that it is concerned too much with buildings, schools, roads and other material things."

"MEANWHILE, the communists are working with the people. If we don't move in the same direction, it could happen within a few years that communist teachers will be in the schools built by the Americans and communist doctors in the hospitals built by the Americans."

Bishop Prata said the pressing need is for a training program that will enable Latin Americans to help themselves.

"The Latin Americans," he said, "are really a very good people, rich in the traditions of their Church. Yet they are very ignorant and it is quite easy to train them the wrong way, as the communists are doing."

"We need priests from your country to reestablish their religious fervor, and we need thousands of lay volunteers to help them to operate in a new social and economic structure."

The Bishop said the communists are more in Bolivia than in any other Latin American country, working principally with students. He said presently 280 Bolivians are university students in Moscow and Prague, Czechoslovakia.

"With us, time is of the essence," he said. "Send us priests, send us teachers, send us people to work with our people. Our country is 98 per cent Catholic and if you send us enough priests we will have one weapon the communists won't be able to cope with."

Lay teacher ratio will be enforced

ROCHESTER, N.Y.—Parochial schools in the Rochester diocese will be required to maintain a 70-30 ratio of religious to lay teachers beginning in September.

Father William M. Roche, diocesan superintendent of schools, said the order will reduce the number of religious teachers in schools that now have more than 70 percent as well as increase the numbers in schools under that ratio.

FAMILY GREETING—Sister Veronica beams as she greets her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Marcellus Bierman of Starlight, Ind., and two of her sisters, Brenda and Bridget. The parents of nine children, Mr. and Mrs. Bierman went through this same ceremony last June with their oldest daughter, Sister Marcellus, who is a novice in the same community.

THE FAITH EXPLAINED

CONTRITION

By REV. LEO J. TRESE

Sometimes we bump into someone on the street or on the bus and we say, "I'm sorry." We say it for the sake of politeness...

We could multiply examples of occasions when people say, "I'm sorry," without really meaning what they say.

The point we want to make, however, is that when we receive the sacrament of Penance, our sorrow must be the only kind of sorrow that will lead us to confession...

How can we tell, then, whether or not we have true contrition? What are the essentials of a genuine act of sorrow?

THEOLOGICANS list four qualities that are essential for true contrition.

The first and obvious quality is that our sorrow must be interior. When we say to God, "I am sorry for having offended You," it is no mere act of politeness...

Just as we may love God quite genuinely without feeling our love, so too we may have a very real sorrow for our sins without having it cause any emotional reaction.

If we are quite honestly determined to abstain, with the help of God's grace, from anything that might seriously offend Him, then we have sorrow which is interior.

Besides being interior, our sorrow also must be supernatural. This concerns the "reason why" we are sorry.

I'm sorry for getting drunk because it left him with a terrible hangover, that is natural sorrow. If a woman is sorry for being late because she did not look her best friend, that is natural sorrow.

Our sorrow is supernatural when it springs from supernatural motives. Such sorrow is not bad sorrow since it is not sufficient as far as God is concerned.

For example, God has told us that we must love Him above all else and that sin is denial of Him of our love.

God has told us that it was sin which caused Jesus to die on the cross and that sin is offense against God's infinite goodness.

God has told us that sin is hated by its very nature and that our sorrow is based on these truths revealed to us by God, then our sorrow is supernatural.

IN THE THIRD PLACE, our sorrow must be supreme. That is, we must really see the moral evil of sin as being the greatest evil of all.

On the contrary, we should have a firm and honest resolve to avoid sin in the future, and to repent again in the event of any future occasions of sin.

IT SHOULD BE noted that our mortal sin can be forgiven, even if we do not repent, provided we are sorry for it and intend to repent.

Our sorrow must be interior, supernatural and supreme. Finally, it must be universal. That means that we must be sorry for all our mortal sins without exception.

A single mortal sin cuts us off from God and keeps sanctifying grace from us. It is the road to grace out of the soul. Either we are sorry for all or we cannot be restored to God's grace.

Let us pray for the sheep who still remain outside the One Fold of Jesus Christ, that they too who are proud to be called Christians, may finally unite under the guidance of the One Shepherd.

By JOHN L. THOMAS, S.J.

My mother and I generally agree on most things, but the problem of what to wear has been causing some trouble. I'm fitter, and I should be allowed to dress as other girls my age do.

Maybe she's much more aware of the fact that you are growing up than you are, Loreta. When people disagree with us, we should not always assume that they are wise or old-fashioned.

A decision concerning the proper wear appearing for young people is not a simple one. It may be that they are looking at things from a different point of view, or in a wider context.

Your letter suggests that your different concern is a matter of propriety. I'm not going into the matter of fashions—there is an old man saying that it's pointless to dress as other girls your age.

Vestments of the Eastern Churches

THE MARONITE LITURGY is the old Liturgy of Antioch, to which some modifications and additions have been adapted from the Roman Liturgy, since the first contacts with the Crusades.

made known by faith, such as belief in heaven and hell or the essential hatredness of sin.

LET US SUPPOSE that I have offered a friend of mine by spreading gossip about him. Wishing to regain his friendship I apologize by saying, "I'm sorry for what I did, Joe; but I reserve the right to do it again if I should happen to be in the mood."

We do not need a professor of psychology to point out to us that Joe still will feel hurt, and rightly so.

THIS IS EQUALLY TRUE of our offenses against God. There is no such thing as a true act of contrition without an accompanying purpose of amendment.

A purpose of amendment is simply a firm and honest resolve to avoid sin in the future, and to repent again in the event of any future occasions of sin.

A near occasion of sin is any circumstance which might easily lead us into sin. Some occasions of sin are "near occasions" by their very nature; very obscene books and pictures, for example.

Past experience usually will tell us what, for us, are the near occasions of sin. All such threats to our spiritual well-being, whether they be persons, places, things, or particular activities, must be resolutely renounced as we make our act of contrition.

IT SHOULD BE noted that our mortal sin can be forgiven, even if we do not repent, provided we are sorry for it and intend to repent.

There are several reasons why her views may differ from yours on this point.

In the first place, she is a mature woman and consequently has definite ideas about what it is to be a Christian woman and what kind of behavior is expected of one.

Fashion, fad and fancy in women's dress may change—some say has remarked that their fashions change but not their designs.

Teenage girls who have not fully outgrown the tomboy stage often find it hard to accept their own femininity.

There is an additional reason why your mother's views on dress may differ from your own, Loreta.

But this is to view conduct and dress in a childish perspective. Whether teenage girls like it or not, the process of puberty has consequences they may not ignore.

The Liturgical Week

By REV. ROBERT W. HOVDA

PENTECOST. What Christians do in their public worship, in the sacred Liturgy, is celebrate great moments in the history of God's saving acts, the deeds He has done out of love for His people.

MONDAY IN PENTECOST. A special Mass each day this week shows the importance the Church attaches to the pentecostal feast.

TUESDAY IN PENTECOST. Jesus is the door to this community of the Spirit (Gospel). To attempt to enter another way is to be a thief and a robber.

EMBER WEDNESDAY IN PENTECOST. Another of the four-seasonal ember weeks with their exceptional Wednesday and Friday and Saturday Masses.

THURSDAY IN PENTECOST. The lessons today teach us of the power of the Spirit, a power which in the end is not to be counteracted by anything human.

EMBER FRIDAY IN PENTECOST. The overflowing gifts of the Spirit are the reasons for the exultation, the gratitude, the praise of today's Mass.

EMBER SATURDAY IN PENTECOST. Apart from conventional and ordination Masses, the many Scripture readings of today's Mass may be simplified to the first and the last two.

PRAYER FOR THE COUNCIL

O Holy Spirit, sent by the Father in the name of Jesus, to assist the Church and keep her from error, pour forth Thy gifts in their fullness on the Ecumenical Council.

Gentle Teacher and Comforter, enlighten the minds of our bishops, who will come together for this Council in ready obedience to the Supreme Pontiff.

Let this age of ours, like another Pentecost, see once more the evidence of Thy power, and grant that Thy Holy Church, guided by Peter and united to Mary, the Mother of Jesus, in constant and unceasing prayer, may glorify the kingdom of our Divine Saviour, the kingdom of truth and justice, of love and peace.

Amen.

MITCHUM IS THE HEAVY

'Cape Fear' is a chiller that lacks credibility

By JAMES W. ARNOLD

One of the oldest scare genres in suspense movies is the Misfit Identity Bit. The hero, awakened by an odd sound, investigates. After several minutes of musing in nightgown amid shadowy corridors, with creepy violins sawing away in the background, she comes to a dead stop as a door slowly creaks open.

Usually there stands, in sudden closeup, the figure pascally, home from his nightly constitutional, or perhaps hulky, munching on a sandwich from the refrigerator. The viewer sighs with relief and grabs another handful of popcorn.

In "Cape Fear," the MI Bit is used at least three times, which indicates a scarcity of material. (Several occasions, of course, the identity is not mistaken—the Menace is really there. But one seems to spend interminable time watching faces stacked about outside windows and waiting for doors to open.)

Otherwise the film, which reunites Gregory Peck with director J. Lee Thompson ("Guns of Navarone") and producer Sy Bartlett ("Pork Chop Hill"), is a workmanlike chiller that never quite credibly, shot on location in the Carolinas, it bears a surface resemblance to "Experiment in Terror," in which two young women were also threatened by a clever, murderous degenerate. The difference is that while "Terror" had a good deal of subtlety, wit and style, "Cape Fear" troils through its clichés with heavy hands, wastes too much time on talk, and except for one or two main sequences, offers little visual excitement.

When tension is high, director Thompson blasts the audience with Bernard Herrmann's undistinguished music, which often flows from an old Tom Mix western scene where the rustlers are sneaking up on the ranchhouse. And when the customers are allowed, too long and too often, to lean over the rapist-villain's shoulder as he abuses an assortment of hard-working actresses (Polly Bergen, Lori Martin and Barrie Chase), it is neither art nor entertainment.

The heavy, incidentally, is sleepier than Robert Mitchum, who moved up from Bad Guy role originally and now has come full circle. Here Mitch combines a few props (big cigar, Panama hat) with a decadent Southern drawl and his normal somnolence to create the film's only memorable character—a brutal eye-evil determined to revenge himself on a key witness (Peck) and family (Polly and Lori).

BOOKS OF THE HOUR

By D. B. THEALL, O.S.B.

Problems of Authority, edited John Todd (Helicon, $5.95) is a collection of 15 essays, originally delivered as papers at a meeting of French and English thinkers, clerical and lay, held in the Abbey of Bee in Normandy during the spring of 1961.

The sponsors of the meeting had previously organized three other such gatherings, dealing with other such problems of the contemporary world as the sources of morality and contemporary views thereof, the role of the arts, and the importance of a theology of work.

The relevance of the present volume, it seems to me, is pointed up by the recent appearance of such books as Gordon Zahn's German Catholics and Hitler's Wars, Fr. Eric D'Arcy's Conscience and Its Right to Freedom, and Fr. Karl Rahner's Free Speech in the Church. These represent some recent Catholic writings whose underlying theme is the nature of authority and its right use; even in the completely secular world, it is realized that there are "problems of power" as well as "problems of power" that as yet resist satisfactory solution or worthwhile acceptance.

Starting from the two-fold premise expressed by the editor, that all authority is from God and can never have its origin in man, and that human authority exists only to work for the growth of those subject to it, rather than toward sheer restraint for the sake of restraint—the authors of the papers present their thoughts under three main headings. These are: the theology of authority; the European historical background of the concept of authority (it might have been interesting to have had an American commentator making a comparison of American with European views here); some of the differences between moral and political authority; and, finally, the exercise of Christian authority today.

Inevitably, in such a collection, some papers seem more to the point and are better organized than others; here one thinks especially of the contribution by Fr. Eric Meila, a priest of the Orthodox Church, on the view of authority in the Church, which his communion espouses, by way of comparison with the Roman view. The issue of the Episcopacy is primary here, of course.

Or one finds, as always, Fr. Yves Congar, O.P., particularly stimulating in his survey of "The Historical Development of Authority" in which he laments the current provisions for the handling of marriage cases in ecclesiastical courts. Whether or not one agrees with his criticism as here given, the note appended to his paper indicates that all the participants, clerical as well as lay, agreed on the desirability of augmenting clerical staffs in diocesan courts with qualified lay lawyers, so as to expedite the disposition of the huge backlog that bedevil marriage courts.

Further, Archbishop Roberts urges that in all judicial proceedings of which churchmen are a part, the English tradition ought to be followed that "justice must not only be done, but be seen to be done"—that a sinister sort of secrecy never be allowed to cloud such judicial proceedings.

Some of the papers make rather heavy reading, but on the whole, the Catholic of today will find much that is relevant to his life he leads in the face of a changing world.

Very much attracted by the forthright comments by Archbishop Roberts, S.J., on what he considers to be the shortcomings of current provisions for the handling of marriage cases in ecclesiastical courts. Whether or not one agrees with his criticism as here given, the note appended to his paper indicates that all the participants, clerical as well as lay, agreed on the desirability of augmenting clerical staffs in diocesan courts with qualified lay lawyers, so as to expedite the disposition of the huge backlog that bedevil marriage courts.

Justice Fairchild said further that a law should be declared unconditional only when it appears to be unconstitutional beyond a reasonable doubt. "It seems to me," he stated, "that the question of whether unconstitutional benefits are conferred on religious groups is in the field of doubt, and, therefore, the Legislature's conclusion that the [transportation] law, as amended, is wise and ought to be retained."

The State Department of Public Instruction said that the state high court's ruling striking down the law means that bus transportation will be provided to public school students only as in the past. It added that no state or local money had been spent in anticipation of the law which was to go into effect July 1.

THREE FAITHS REPRESENTED

Canadian scholars hold 'unity' meeting

By J. F. WILLIAMS

MONTREAL, Que. — Sixteen Catholic theologians and professors of Sacred Scripture met with 21 theologians and professors of the Protestant and Greek Orthodox faiths here in another step towards improved Christian unity.

The full-day meeting took place at the Montreal Diocesan College, an Anglican institution for students studying at McGill University theology school.

The meeting was part of the ecumenical movement announced when Cardinal Paul Emile Leger, Archbishop of Montreal, set up a Catholic Diocesan Ecumenical Commission with Father Irene Reuben, S.J., director of the Catholic Inquiry Forum, as chairman.

Metropolitan Athanasios of the Greek Orthodox Church in Canada was the ranking prelate at the meeting. Protestants present represented the Anglican, United Church, Presbyterian and Lutheran faiths.

THE CATHOLIC theologians and professors of Scripture present included Jesuits, Dominicans, Oblates, Augustinians, Franciscans and members of the diocesan clergy.

Father Russell Breen, chaplain of the Newman Club of McGill University, served as chairman of the meeting. He was selected by a committee representing the Catholic and non-Catholic groups.

The committee also selected the subject for the day's discussions, the place of preaching in the Church. Four papers were delivered during the day: "Preaching in the Primitive Church as Illustrated in St. Augustine," delivered by Father Peter Lapellier, O.P., of Ottawa; "Preaching in the Life of the Church," by the Rev. Mr. Jay; "Place of Preaching in the Church," by the Rev. Mr. Thompson; and "Second Vatican Council and Preaching," delivered by Father Gregory Baum, O.S.A., Toronto.

relationship was apparent throughout the conference. The participants joined in two prayer periods for the intention of Unity. A committee of two Catholic and two non-Catholic representatives will confer on date of the next meeting, to be held in the fall. They also will decide the subject for discussion.

Social tenets of Pontiff are lauded by Goldberg

PORTLAND, Ore.—U.S. Labor Secretary Arthur J. Goldberg said here that social justice principles laid down by Pope John XXIII contain the basic requirements for achievement of national unity.

He said at the commencement at the University of Portland that propositions advanced by the Pope in his encyclical Mater et Magistra coincide with a fundamental purpose of good government cited by framers of the U.S. Constitution: the promotion of the general welfare.

GOLDBERG first noted the stress the Kennedy administration has placed upon the need for a greater sense of national unity to cope with challenges to the U.S. at home and abroad.

"Yet we cannot be successful abroad unless we are successful at home," he stated. "And we cannot be successful at home unless all Americans, all institutions and organizations — labor and management and government and the general public — pull together to achieve the goals of greater economic growth, full employment and full production, stable prices, and equality of opportunity."

necessary, and to achieve this both individual and group interests must operate within the framework of the common good.

"The reason for the existence of the state is the realization of the common good. The state thus cannot keep aloof from the economic world."

"I AM SURE you will recognize these propositions," Goldberg told the 279 graduates of the university. "They come not from the President's Council of Economic Advisors, but from Pope John XXIII's encyclical Mater et Magistra."

"I believe the Holy Father's statement is sound. I believe it is good ethics and good morality and good economics. And I believe that our forefathers, drawn from many religious faiths, echoed the same essential point of view when they wrote in the Constitution, as one of the fundamental purposes of government, the promotion of the general welfare."

Paper raps intolerance of Spanish

COPENHAGEN — Denmark's Catholic weekly newspaper has taken the Spanish embassy here to task for asserting that Protestants have no right to propagate their faith in Spain.

At the same time, a small band of members of Workers Catholic Action joined in a demonstration of support for the striking workers of northern Spain.

The Catholic paper, Katolsk Ugeblad, devoted its lead editorial to criticism of the Spanish embassy for its defense of religious intolerance in Spain.

IT NOTED that the embassy in one of its regular newsletters had stated that religious freedom does not harmonize with Spain's position as "a Catholic nation."

The paper further queried the embassy's newsletter as stating that because of the "perfect religious unity" in Spain, Protestants have no right to propagate their faith there.

The Catholic paper said such views are unacceptable. It pointed to religious freedom in Denmark, declaring that in spite of the official position of the Lutheran Church, Catholics and other Christians have perfect freedom of worship and missionary work. Even the Catholic schools are supported by grants from the State, it said.

"How can the Spanish embassy use such arguments in Denmark? How do they dare use them?"

THE DEMONSTRATION in favor of the Spanish strikers was organized by communists and took place in front of the Spanish embassy.

Lauds government example of service

WEBSTER GROVES, Mo.—The Federal government's concern for other people, as evidenced in many of its programs, was praised here by Cardinal Joseph Ritter.

Speaking to graduates of Webster College for women here, the Archbishop of St. Louis cited the need for personal service to others by graduates of Catholic colleges and said the U.S. government had set an example in this regard.

"If a democracy is to be successful, if the Church is to accomplish her mission here on earth, she must reach not just a limited number of people, but the masses. These people must be 'infiltrated' by people like yourselves. After all, we are in the world only for a very short time," he said.

"We have really good leadership now nationally," he added. "Our government is assuming such a role of leadership, showing us that we must have concern for all men—not only for those we like, but for all men."

Christian unity seen vital in nuclear age

Christians, as "a minority in a hostile world," must strive for unity to save the world from destruction before the ultimate weapon is unleashed, graduates at Marian College were told by one of America's foremost Protestants.

"This unity can be achieved, said industrialist J. Irwin Miller, of Columbus, Ind., by a consuming brotherly love that will not allow doctrinal differences to nullify the call of the Gospel. President of the National Council of Churches, Miller spoke at Marian's commencement exercises on June 3.

"OUR DIFFERENCES are grave, run deep and are not quickly to be resolved," Miller told the graduates of the liberal arts college. "But if we can speak with one voice, the world race might run its course to destruction."

"My scientific friends tell me that the ultimate weapon, the one which can totally destroy the race and make the world unfit for life, is now clearly possible, and will almost certainly be in human hands within a decade."

He likened the Christians of today to a family in which love of one for another should transcend all differences, allowing the family to achieve unity in spite of diversity.

Without this unity, he said, the West is "ill-prepared to respond to the call of the age."

"THE TIME IS short," he added. "The ultimate weapon may be at hand. The issue could be decided in your generation. The burden is on you graduates as never before."

"Surely, only by individually losing ourselves in love and affection for others can unity be achieved. Our differences involve beliefs which we hold dear, and should hold dear. There are too many people who say one faith is as good as another. But we can differ in love and work as one."

Diplomas were awarded by Archbishop Schulte, chancellor of Marian College, to candidates presented by Msgr. Francis J. Reine, Marian president.

Miller was introduced by Msgr. John J. Doyle, professor of philosophy, who has been chaplain of Marian since its founding in 1937.
